U. S. Demands Information on Missing Airmen

By ROY ESSOYAN

MOSCOW (AP) — U. S. Charge d'Affaires Richard H. Davis delivered an urgent request to the Soviet Foreign Ministry today for information on 11 missing crew members of a U. S. Air Force plane that crashed in Soviet Armenia.

The State Department said in Washington the plane had been intercepted by Soviet fighters but did not charge it was shot down.

The note demanded information on the whereabouts and condition of the 11 men, their earliest return if they are still alive and the return of the bodies of six other crew members killed in the crash Sept. 2.

The Soviet government reported discovery of the plane's wreckage and the bodies of six crewmen in a formal note delivered to Davis Friday, six days after the U. S. government personnel to examine remains on the missing plane and 10 days after the plane disappeared.

The State Department note also asked the Soviet government to allow Embassy officials and other wreckage at the scene of the crash.

It asked the Soviet government to press a search for the missing 11 if they have not been located so far.

The American note expressed surprise—"in view of the involvement of Soviet aircraft"—that the Soviet government had originally denied any knowledge of the incident and that it delayed in replying to an American note of Sept. 6 requesting information.

The American note said Soviet fighter planes were seen to intercept the plane on the Soviet-Turkish border. It demanded information on the full circumstances surrounding and following interception of the American plane by Soviet aircraft.

It was reliably learned that a Soviet Foreign Ministry official in a telephone conversation with Davis Monday, two days after the first U. S. note was delivered, denied all knowledge of the incident. "The Kremlin said, etc., the graft," 113, ta20.

'Law' Remains After Court Adjourns

By SAUL PETT

WASHINGTON (AP) — "I don't care where I sit," the old lawyer told the attendant. "Can't see, anyway; I'm three-fourths blind. But I can hear and I want to hear everything."

He sat down in the back row, carefully folded his hands over the head of his cane and rested his chin on his hands. Into those sightless old eyes there came a poignant moment of reverence.

In the high-ceilinged chamber of the U. S. Supreme Court, against the columns of austere marble and the richness of red velvet drapes, men talked of the law.

And as they talked, man seemed to grow smaller and the law larger.

The last arguments went on before the moment of decision. Should seven Negro children in a place called Little Rock be allowed to go to school immediately with white children? Or should they be told to wall?

Up on the bench, nine men in black robes listened.

Sam Warren studied the speaker with an intense frown. Felix Frankfurter rocked gently back and forth in his high leather chair, wailing with a smile to pounce on the first inconsistency. Harold H. Burton sat motionless, frozen in thought. William O. Douglas scratched his sandy hair. Tom Clark sent a court page off for a law book.

They listened and they also inquired with questions.

They questioned the speakers slowly, patiently, even in his own way. Each appeared to be probing gently, groping through the argument and counterargument for the illogic and logic for the extraneous and the essence, for the road to nowhere and the road to truth.

The arguments went on during the afternoon with scarcely any emotion. When they ended, the courtroom began to clear. The old blind lawyer in the back stood up with pride and satisfaction.

The lawyer went. The law remained.

Auto Industry Resumes Talks on Contracts

DETROIT (AP) — The auto industry intensified its contract talks with the United Auto Workers today amidst reports that General Motors and the UAW are less than seven cents apart.

The speeded up negotiations were held against a backdrop of a UAW strike deadline at Ford.

"If no agreement is reached there,

The Big Three said no new contract proposals had been made to the UAW but all parties issued cautiously optimistic statements after Thursday's bargaining sessions.

Chief interest centered on Ford.

Where UAW President Walter P. Reuther took personal command Thursday of the union's drive to a contract to cover 100,000 Ford hourly rated workers.

Unusual Saturday and Sunday talks were scheduled by the Ford-UAW teams as they sought to hammer out an agreement before the strike deadline. GM and Chrysler apparently had no date set for whether similar talks should be held over the weekend.

The report of the seven cents spread between GM and the UAW came from a usually well-informed source who insisted his identity not be disclosed. There was no immediate comment from GM or the UAW on the report.

Calls Arkansas a Political Dictatorship

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — Republican National Chairman Mende Alcorn said here today he saw in Arkansas "the closest thing to a political dictatorship anywhere in the United States."

"It ought to be stopped," he declared.

Alcorn's obvious reference to the Democratic administration of Gov. Orval Faubus was contained in the chairman's address to the Arkansas State Republican Convention.

He warned that the control of the Democratic Party was not in the hands of southern conservatives but is held by a "left-wing gang."

Another speaker, GOP gubernatorial candidate George W. Johnson of Greenwood, told the delegates they should worry less about who is elected governor and concentrate on election Republicans state legislators.

George F. Cole of Batesville was named temporary chairman of the convention.

Alcorn said the Democratic Party is dominated by "power hungry men who, afforded the opportunity, would destroy many of our freedoms."

U. S. to Supply Soviet Plane

AUCKLAND, New Zealand (AP) — The U. S. Navy is going to help supply a Russian scientific reconnaissance team in the antarctic.

Gen. Adm. George D. Jones, commander of the U. S. Antarctic expedition, said today that the American base at McMurdo sound will provide 1,600 gallons of fuel for the Russian plane.

The Russian expedition asked American support so it could reconnote part of a route for the proposed transantarctic tractor train in the 1958-60 season.

American Youth Master at Chess

BOSTON, Yugoslavia (AP) — Bobby Fischer, the 15-year-old Brooklyn youngster who has the distinction today of being the youngest Grand Master in the long history of chess, achieved the little Thursday night when he wound up fifth in the six-week international chess tournament set up to determine the potential challengers for the world title.

In September Young Folks Just Naturally Think About School

By MARY ANITA LASETER

September and School always seem to have a synonymous sound. The words don't actually rhyme except in association. In that sense, they are as close as Plan to Geometry.

To those enrolled in Kindergartens, grade schools, high schools, or institutions of higher learning, September means School in a very literal as well as literary way. By this mid-September weekend, prospective travelers on the road to Education have usually bought their tickets and embarked on their journeys.

For those at the beginning of the trip, it is a great adventure, as it offers one of the first opportunities to be "almost grown-up." By the time the traveler has passed several milestones, though he realizes the road isn't always "smooth as silk," he is no longer a student but a member of the six categories — boys, girls, men, women, teachers, and parents. The latter two classifications are usually kept separate in a student's mind until he has climbed a certain hill on the Road of Life. (An adult once named it Fool's Hill.) Only then do parents and teachers again become members of the human race.

Speaking of things scholastic, Alonso Banks, a principal in the Baltimore Public Schools, has written what he calls "Commandments for the School Year." First, to the parents:

"Thou shall not become an army sergeant, barking orders to thy children, but seek rather to guide them by thine own example. Thou shall not chase the Almighty Dollar so furiously as to become a bear instead of a father or a workhorse instead of a mother.

For children: "Thou shall not use thy home merely as a base of operations, from whence thou goest forth for pleasure. But thou shall, now and then, run an errand or wash a dish for the aid of thy elders. Take heed that thou dost not put furrows in the brow and gray hairs in the head of thy parent. lest thine own children, in due time, bring sorrow and grief upon thee.

"What about the end of the road of Education?" the student may ask or simply wonder. As Shakespeare said a long time ago, "Ah,

that's the rub."

For you see, education is like the horizon, and neither is ever reached. And both seem more distant and harder to attain as years go by. Nevertheless, whether it is by Way of Formal Education or on the Road of Hard Knocks, man continues to learn.

The Road doesn't end until Life

does, also.

U.S. Trouble Just Started in Far East

By JAMES MARLOW
Associated Press News Analyst

WASHINGTON (AP) — It's no wonder Secretary of State Dulles indicated the United States might make concessions to the Red Chinese if they're good boys. He has

All of them can be telescoped into one big question:

How long can this country go on having crises after crises with the Chinese Communists without getting into war over the small Quemoy and Matsu islands near the China mainland?

This time American determination and strength may have chilled the Communists, particularly since they lack a navy, and perhaps lacked atomic bombs and enough planes to take a chance on a next time.

Next time, with help from the Soviet Union, they may risk the chance. It's a situation which can hardly go on indefinitely.

When the Reds drove Chiang Kaishek off the mainland—to Formosa, 100 miles across the straits—his retreating troops grabbed Quemoy, three miles off the China coast, and the Matus, 10 miles off the coast.

This country is pledged by treaty with Chiang to defend Formosa from Red attack. It must do that. But Congress left it to the President to decide whether it was necessary to fight for Quemoy and the Matus to defend Formosa.

Chiang complicated things for the United States—although Dulles told a news conference Tuesday this country didn't object—but moving a third of his army from Formosa to Quemoy.

That put a tremendous potential obligation on the United States to defend Quemoy. Loss of a third of his army would truly make Chiang a paper tiger on Formosa where he could hardly survive very long anyway without American help.

So, when the Reds bombed Quemoy and the Matus, the United States got involved. Were those islands by themselves really necessary for the defense of Formosa? If they were, the President could order a flight to protect them.

Dulles said: "What is involved here is not just two pieces of real estate—Quemoy and Matsu. Obviously, if that was all that was involved, there would be no basis for action on the part of the United States."

That seems to say that by themselves the islands are not worth defending and are not necessary for Formosa's defense. That raises a nice question—all by itself:

Why then did the United States ever let Chiang put so many troops there, creating a situation which might require American intervention and war not only with Red China but perhaps even with the United Kingdom?

The United States took that chance by using units of the 7th Fleet to convoy supplies, particularly ammunition, to Chiang's bombarded forces on Quemoy.

Dulles said what is involved is the whole position of the free world in the western Pacific. He explained that: "If you fall back from advanced positions and indicate to an aggressor that you have no will to stand, then your position becomes weaker, your allies lose confidence."

But if Chiang hadn't sent his troops to the islands, the Reds could have taken them. Thus Chiang's sending his troops to Quemoy set in motion a whole series of events, actual and possible, which created this situation.

While Quemoy and the Matus aren't worth defending themselves—if this is a proper interpretation of what Dulles was saying—the United States couldn't yield the islands to the Reds under threat of force.

But so long as Chiang holds those islands, it seems sure there will be a repetition of this crisis which was a repetition—a rebellion called it—or a similar crisis three years ago.

Yet as time passes and Red Chinese strength grows in weapons and planes, this country may become increasingly unwilling to risk war to defend the small islands.

What's the answer? Dulles indicated concessions might be made to the Reds if they stopped talking about using force to take the islands. What concessions? Maybe this country will persuade Chiang to pull back his troops after a proper interval and let the Reds have Quemoy and the Matus.

Chiang could hardly refuse if the United States told him that's what he wanted. His utterly dependent on the United States for his existence.

Residents of the Southeast and the Great Lakes area had better keep their raincoats handy, because they'll get more rain than is usual in September. Most of the western half of the nation will have unusually dry weather.

Folks in the Southern and Central Plains will have warmer-than-usual weather in September, with the highest temperatures in the Southwest. The Great Lakes area, which had a cool—and sometimes cold—summer, will get more of the same.

Prescott Ministerial Alliance Holds Meeting

The Prescott Ministerial Alliance met recently at the Lawson Hotel Listed below are items which were brought up before the meeting.

The Alliance is asking the business places in town to please contact some member of the Alliance before giving aid to any one who may claim that he or she has been sent by the Alliance. We operate on a very limited budget and the people try to help often times abuse the privilege granted them.

The Alliance will have a booth at the County Fair. Our theme will be built around the idea of regular Church attendance. We have designated the month of October as Go To Church Month and we are asking the citizens of our town to help make October a great month in our churches.

The Alliance also voted to discontinue the 5 minute devotional period over KXAR. We feel that the time allotted us is too brief to really justify a trip to Hope each morning. Tape recordings have not been to satisfactory.

The Alliance also voted to have the Union Thanksgiving Service at the First Baptist Church. Each church will have an opportunity to participate in the service.

Members of the Alliance will participate in the chapel services to be held at the school during the year. We pledge our support to the school and to the town in any worthy endeavor.

Rev. J. H. Robertson and elders T. M. Bemis, Charles Tompkins and Willier Hirst attended the fall session of the Onondaga Presbytery Tuesday in the First Presbyterian Church at Camden.

Mrs. Brice Stewart attended a beauty clinic held at Hotel McCartney in Texarkana Monday.

Russell Mobley accompanied his daughter, Freddie, to Conway on Monday where she enrolled at Hendrix College.

Rev. Alfred DeBlack attended a meeting of Methodist ministers of the Hope district held in Nashville on Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Charlie Pye have returned from North Little Rock where they visited their daughter, Mrs. Ray Vick and family.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Gilbert were Tuesday visitors in Texarkana.

Earl Eppeler spent Monday in Little Rock on business.

Derrick Andrews and Charlie Bolls left Monday for Little Rock where they will attend Draughon's Business College.

Marriage of Mistakes
Is a Muddled Affair

Dear Dorothy Dix:

I have been married for 20 years to a man I have loathed and feared every minute of that time. I dated him for three years before our marriage and knew that didn't love him as I should. However, he was so gentle and generous, there was no one else, and everyone thought he was a good catch. So, I took him — to my eternal regret. No sooner were we married than he completely changed. I was determined to be a good wife to make up for not loving him, and to make the best of a financial position that wasn't very good, but I couldn't cope with him. He became a snarling, raging, naging beast. He was cruel even in his lovemaking. We had four children, then he became so bad that he was put in a mental institution.

He came out two years ago, but wasn't the least bit improved. I want the hospital to take him back, but they say he isn't bad enough. He threatens to kill us all, and I know he'll keep his word. The authorities admit he is potentially dangerous, but they claim that as long as he's an able-bodied man, capable of working and supporting his family, they can do nothing more.

The children hate and fear him as much as I do. He has a good job, but can't handle money. I'm only 39. Isn't there any way I can salvage my life? — Sally L.

Dear Sally: You have piled mistake over mistake over the years and neither I, nor the hospital authorities, can pull you out of your trouble. It's still up to you! Your marriage was wrong to begin with.

You married

expecting to take about everything; you never thought about giving. Of course you were willing to be a good housekeeper, but that's not enough. When you discovered that your husband was cruel you should have left him — before you had four children. No woman should be expected to take brutality from any man. You could have gotten out and supported yourself then, as you could now.

It's entirely possible that your feeling for your husband (of which he was very well aware, I'm sure) contributed to his later actions.

There aren't nearly enough beds in our mental hospitals to care for conviction of Dominic Guagliardo, Tampa, Fla., convicted of aspiring to commit larceny while employed by the Air Force in Morocco. Guagliardo, an electrical lineman, received a three-year sentence and a $1,000 fine. He has been free under bond pending the outcome of his appeal.

Dear Dorothy Dix:
The patients who need them. Borderline cases must depend on outside help. Consult your pastor or your local Family Service Association representative for more help. Above all, help yourself by getting work and freeing yourself of a man with whom you have never had anything in common.

Dear Dorothy Dix:
What do you think of a woman who quickly buys an efficient gift for a new baby in the neighborhood and uses it as a means of getting "it" for a peek at the house? Isn't this unfair? — Gladys.

Dear Gladys: Why should it be considered unfair? Because you refuse to spend 99 cents and want a free peek? If their house is that interesting maybe the newcomers should open up for a 25-cent tour.

Dear Dorothy Dix:

When I married, my parents asked us to live at home, as I was the last of a large family. We agreed, but have walked a rocky road ever since. Mother treats me like a single daughter and father expects the same entering that was his before I married. I have two children and cannot give my parents the attention they want. They are both completely able-bodied, financially secure, but I guess I spoiled them. My husband, who has been very patient through it all, now wants out. He's insisting that we go on our own. I can't bear to hurt my folks. What can I do? — Corinne.

Dear Corinne: Your husband and children are also your "folks," and under the circumstances they deserve first claim on your time and attention. Mother and Dad have other children to pamper them. Let the others take a share in the responsibility, but you get into your own home.

Showing at the Dixie Drive-In

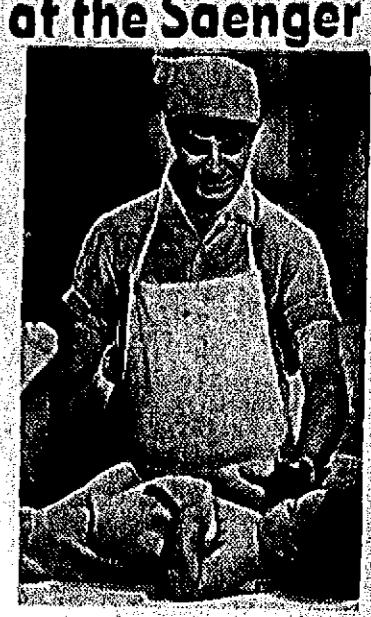

"CONGO CROSSING" stars Virginia Mayo and George Nader this weekend at the Dixie Drive-In theater. Second half of a double Technicolor twin bill is "Run of the Arrow," starring Rod Steiger.

"RUN OF THE ARROW" stars Rod Steiger, Sarita Montiel and Brian Keith and plays this weekend at the Dixie Drive-In theater, along with "Congo Crossing."

Jerry Lewis is the "Mother of the Year" in this laugh riot, called "Rock-A-Bye Baby," showing Sunday and Monday at the Saenger Theater. In Technicolor, the picture also stars Marilyn Maxwell, Reginald Gardner and Connie Stevens.

weekend and a man had to be along.

"So I, along with 2 other Brownie fathers, enlisted in this course taught by a Brownie leader. First she showed us pictures of things like a guy up to his arms in snow and she'd say, 'This is snow.' I kept asking her how to make a fire without matches, but she kept ignoring me."

"Somehow I managed to get my outdoor consultant's card and my wife and I went off to this cabin in the woods with 2 Brownies. I had to sleep in the same room with 'em and the first night I overslept. It was broad daylight when I woke up and there were 2 pairs of Brownie eyes staring at me. I dove into a sort of broom closet and that was my dressing room for the weekend."

"I did manage to learn the Brownie song. Everybody stood up and held hands and I'll show you how it goes."

Buddy Ebsen Tells About His Career

By CHARLES MERCER

NEW YORK (AP) - Buddy Ebsen, who plays the role of an outstanding woodsman of colonial days in the new television series "Northwest Passage," was unbuttoned the other day into describing his personal life in the woods and how to start a fire without matches.

"You take a couple of hot electrical wires," he said, "and touch their ends together and if you're lucky, the sparks will eventually light something."

Bobcats Smash Pine Bluff 32-0

By Charles W. Wyllie Jr.

The Hope Bobcats, playing in mid-season, form soundly whipped the visiting Pine Bluff Zebras last night by a 32 to 0 score. It was a sweet game for the local team which couldn't do nothing wrong. The visitors are members of the Big 9 conference, the strongest in the state.

All started in the first quarter and when that 12 minutes was over Pine Bluff was a badly beaten crew. Hope received the opening kickoff and marched 57 yards for paydirt with David Watkins passing the final 11 to Bill Hair in the end zone. Graves' kick was wide.

Hope kicked to Pine Bluff who returned to their own 39. Three plays later the Cats recovered a Zebra fumble on the Pine Bluff 48. On the first play from scrimmage Bill Hair got behind the Zebra defenders and Watkins tossed him a perfect strike. Graves made this kick and the stunned Zebras were in for a bad beating.

Again the Bobcats kicked off and two plays later, Bill Hair intercepted a Zebra pass and scampered 50 yards for another touchdown, giving the Bobcats a commanding 19-0 lead.

But Hope, looking mighty sharp for an opening game, wasn't through. In the second period Don Booth plunged one yard for the score, climaxing a 41 yard drive. Graves missed the extra point.

The Hope band put on a fine show during the half-time period.

In the second half Pine Bluff looked better but the margin was too great. Actually the Zebras were able to get within scoring distance only twice in the entire game. After a scoreless third period Don Booth ripped off the final nine yards of a 60 yard drive for the last score. Watkins made the PAT.

Coach John Pierce, beaming with pride, said the "whole team put out a tremendous effort." He wouldn't single out any player, crediting them all with wanting to win and playing like champions. And the fans loved it. The Bobcats are the fair-haired boys in this city today.

Hope meets the always powerful DeQueen Leopards on the local field next Friday night.

Outboard Motor Regulations

Court procedure and the workings of the legal mind long have been a profound mystery to the layman. Anyway, with all of the respect that may be due, some of the rulings of courts now and then do not make very much sense.

Rather recently a Wisconsin judge found himself confronted with a test case which was brought about to try the validity of rulings made by the powers-that-be of a small town in Polk County, Wis. The judge's name, appropriately enough, is Eugene Fish.

It was his opinion, and probably still is, that a certain ordinance exceeded the authority vested in the town board to regulate noise and establish safety regulations relating to boats. Then he goes on to say why:

"The size of the motor," says the judge, "is not necessarily the sole criterion by which noise is created." I never knew a criterion to create any noise, but we'll let that go. We know what he means.

He means that a large motor does not necessarily make a lot of noise. In that he is correct. Those big 30-horse motors, placed under water with efficient mufflers can be made to run as quietly as a sewing machine. Trouble is, the boys don't want 'em quiet, they want 'em fast.

So, once the restrictions are removed and no longer is this little lake held down to 7½ horse motors, then the boys step up the wallops of the big motors by removing the muffler. One of those big one-striped down to racing form makes enough racket to chase you right out of the county.

The next bit of reasoning is this—the judge said that it was demonstrated by a preponderance of evidence that a large motor did not create a larger wake than a 70 horsepower motor, powered a boat with several passengers in it.

Right again, Your Honor. But what about that same large motor with its large boat loaded with a proportionate number of passengers? That phase of the question evidently was overlooked.

The opinion continues with this: "to deny a right to water skiers to use a large motor for guy regulation purposes where such use does not inherently interfere with the rights of others is an unreasonable restriction." Not quite with that. Water skiing is fun and a great many people enjoy it. The trouble is that water skiers simply will not confine their activities to

THE STORY: Irma Mc-Kennie, owner of the Four-Arrow Ranch, tells her new foreman John Lane that nesters have already raided her place, killing two of her cowboys.

Chapter VI
"What does Sheriff Cole say about the possibility of a missing decide."

"He says that is for the courts to decide," Lane asked.

"And you still intend to marry him anyway?" Lane asked bluntly.

"No, thanks. I'm full as a tick, Lane said.

Lane moved his gaze around the living room, which was newly furnished. "Do you own this place, too?"

Mouth full of turkey meat, Irma said, "It belongs to Mr. Erwin. We just rented it to us. Everything in it belongs to us, though, and we've got to get busy and do some packing." She crossed the room to dispose of the turkey bone by tossing it into the fireplace.

Mrs. Erwin said, "Don't do that, Irma; you'll smell up the whole house."

Irma looked at Lane and gestured with resignation. "Tom is a studly the ring she was wearing. She sat with her slim hands folded in her lap afterward.

The housekeeper came in to adjust the wick on one of the table lamps, and when she left the room, Irma got up and followed her.

Mrs. Erwin said then, giving Lane a direct look, "If you ask me, Irma's driving her geese to a bad market."

"Sheriff Cole isn't the man for her!"

Mrs. Erwin shook her head. "Tom is a fine man, but I think he's a weakling. He's no coward, though, and sometimes I think he's just slow witted. He can't see any farther than the end of his nose. His deputy really runs this country, and he runs Tom, too."

Lane kept watching her. "Tom thinks folks gave him that office because they liked him personally, but they didn't. They elected him because he was running against Louis Scharf, and they'd rather have him than Scharf."

"Then who?" Lane asked sharply. He wanted her to repeat the name, just to be sure he heard right. He knew a Scharf; he'd almost killed a man by that name.

"Louis Scharf, Tom's made Louis

Lane said. "I'm going to have to hire men from around here."

"If I were you, then, I'd hire

Ken Webster, and let him help

you get an outfit together. He's working for George Finewalt

now, but if I told him we needed

him, he would be glad to ride for

the Four-Arrow again. He just couldn't get along with Ellis Draper."

Webster was foreman when the nesters made their raid?

Irma nodded.

Irma, returning, asked, "When is your crew coming, Mr. Lane?"

We want to get moved out to the ranch as soon as possible."

"I don't have a crew yet. I'm going to have to hire men from around here."

If I were you, then, I'd hire

Ken Webster, and let him help

you get an outfit together. He's

working for George Finewalt

now, but if I told him we needed

him, he would be glad to ride for

the Four-Arrow again. He just

er."

Does it show on me?"

"Something shows. Something has made you strong."

"Strength can sometimes be dangerous to you, Irma. It gets you into a lot of trouble."

"I wish I had your strength,"

she murmured.

He took his hat from the hall tree and set it on his head.

She asked then, "What do you plan to do after our agreement with Colonel Richards is terminated?"

"That's looking ahead pretty far, Irma."

"Well, what are you going to do?"

Go back to Lampasas, I reckon, and hire out to Major Jones.

Lane didn't want to begin a

Ranger was something that appealed to him very little.

Lane had, he figured, seen enough fighting and bloodshed

during the War Between the States to last him a lifetime.

He had no desire now to ride day and night, chasing redskins and renegade Mexicans as his gangar and giving none and all the while keeping an eye out for desperado gringos who were worse than the redskins and the Mexicans put together.

You don't have to go back to Lampasas, Irma said. "You can work for me."

Slowly he said, "I don't know

Irma. Well talk about that when the time comes."

Lane pushed the door and turned around, finding the girl moving closer. It was in her eyes but in addition to the dim light that filled the room in the living room she wanted to come into his arms. She cooed, he held her away.

Gently he said, "Don't worry, I trust you. I'll want fight those communists. I've given Colonel Rios orders to the U.S. to consider more effective ways."

News Briefs

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — The Arkansas Public Service Commission yesterday prepared to sever all ties with the State Commerce Commission, created last year and transfer about $100,000 from its account to the Commerce Commission. The action was required by legislative directive.

ARKADELPHIA, Ark. (AP) — Dr. D. D. McBrien, president of Henderson State Teachers College here, yesterday announced the appointment of three new faculty members. The appointees and departments, etc., are: Mrs. Elsie Ross, and John D. Stanley, Division of Education and Psychology; and Robert C. Sunkel, art.

CROSSSETT, Ark. (AP) — The Crosssett Company announced yesterday a $102,000 expansion of its stream improvement system will be completed this fall. The project includes addition of two new fiber settling pools and alterations in the larger of two existing water impounding basins.

Even the Son of God could not always have His way. The cup did not pass.
He drank it in calm, deliberate and majestic mood. God did not take away the cup but He did stand by in loving sympathy. In drinking that bitter cup.
Jesus became the Saviour of the world. God gave Him strength for the heroic deed and through His suffering He became perfect. You and I hold back and cry the same prayer. We tremble at the ordeal ahead and our faith shrinks when we know we must suffer the fate...

 for high adventure and noble service through His church.
